About the authors

Nils Bubandt is senior lecturer in the Department of Anthropology and Ethnography at the University of Aarhus, Denmark. He has conducted fieldwork in Eastern Indonesia since 1991 on a variety of subjects ranging from witchcraft, social forestry, and globalisation to millenarianism, decentralisation, and communal violence. His most recent publications on the imaginaries of tradition and modernity include: 'Genesis in Buli: Christianity, Blood, and Vernacular Modernity on an Indonesian Island'. Ethnology 43(3) (2004); 'Violence and Millenarian Modernity in Eastern Indonesia', in Cargo, Cult and Culture Critique, H. Jebens, ed. pp. 92-116. Honolulu: University of Hawai'i Press (2004).

Denis Chevallier is doctor of ethnology, curator (conservateur en chef) at the Musée national des arts et traditions populaires, and in charge of transforming the Parisian based museum into the Musée des civilisations de l'Europe et de la Méditerranée in Marseille, France. His research focuses on crafts and industry, migration, regional identity, and heritage. Recent publications include: Carrières d'objets, innovation et relance, ed. with Christian Bromberger. Paris: Maison des sciences de l'homme (1999); Vives campagnes. Le patrimoine rural, projet de société, ed. Paris: Autrement (2000); Tradition and transmission, ed. with Lotika Varadarajan. New Delhi: Aryan Press (2003); De la châtaigne au carnaval. Relances de traditions dans l'Europe contemporaine, ed. with Christian Bromberger and Danièle Dosseto. Die: Editions A Die (2004).

Roberta Colombo Dougoud is curator of the Oceanic collection at the Musée d'ethnographie in Geneva. She received her PhD in Anthropology from the University of Fribourg, Switzerland, and has done fieldwork in the village of Kambot (Papua New Guinea, East Sepik Province). Her writings and research have focused on contemporary Oceanic art, art and identity, tourism and intercultural communication. She has taught anthropology at the University of Fribourg. Her publications include: Interkulturelle Kommunikation im

Nationalstaat, ed. with Christian Giordano and Elke-Nicole Kappus. Fribourg and Münster: Universitäts-Verlag and Waxmann (1998); 'Nouvelles formes artistiques et identité: Les storyboards de Kambot (Papouasie-Nouvelle-Guinée)', in Le monde et son double. Ethnographie: trésors d'un musée rêvé. Laurent Aubert, ed. Paris and Genève: Adam Biro, Musée d'ethnographie: 202-212 (2000); 'Souvenirs from Kambot (Papua New Guinea): The Sacred Search for Authenticity', in Souvenirs: The Material Culture of Tourism, Michael Hitchcock and Ken Teague, eds. Aldershot: Ashgate: 223-237 (2000).

Britta Duelke, PhD, currently works at the Frobenius Institute, Frankfurt am Main, Germany, and teaches Social Anthropology at Frankfurt University. Her long-term anthropological research in Northern Australia resulted in publications such as '... same but different...': Vom Umgang mit Vergangenheit – Tradition und Geschichte im Alltag einer nordaustralischen Aborigines-Kommune. Cologne (1998), as well as numerous articles on both theoretical and empirical issues. She is completing a book on the 'Anthropology of Blame'.

Christian K. Højbjerg is associate professor in the Department of Archaeology and Ethnology, University of Copenhagen, Denmark. He is specialised in West Africa and has conducted long-term fieldwork among the Loma of Guinea as well as shorter periods of fieldwork in Mauritania and Senegal. His main interests are in ritual, religion and politics. He has published numerous articles on the Loma in Guinea and Liberia and has just completed a book manuscript entitled Resisting State Iconoclasm: Religion and Political Culture among the Loma of Guinea. His most recent publications include 'Universalistic Orientations of an Imagistic Mode of Religiosity: The Case of the West African Poro Cult', in Ritual and Memory: Toward a Comparative Anthropology of Religion, H. Whitehouse and J. Laidlaw, eds., pp.163-175. Walnut Creek: AltaMira Press (2004); 'Masked Violence: Ritual Action and the Perception of Violence in an Upper Guinea Ethnic Conflict', in Religion and African Civil Wars. N. Kastfelt, ed., pp. 147-171. London: Hurst & Company (2005).

Erich Kolig is senior lecturer in Social Anthropology at Otago University, New Zealand. He has published extensively, mainly on Australian Aboriginal culture and society, c. 70 publications; among them several books: The Silent Revolution (1981), The Noonkanbah Story (1987, 3rd enlarged ed. 1989), Dreamtime Politics (1989), a monograph on a nineteenth-century New Zealand explorer (Umstrittene Würde 1996); articles on Islam in Indonesia, Muslims in New Zealand, and on several other topics. He has edited (with H. Mueckler) a volume on the emergence of indigeneity and the cultural construction of identity, entitled Politics of Indigeneity in the South Pacific (2002). He has been visiting professor at the University of Vienna several times and has done research in Australia, New Zealand, Afghanistan, Indonesia, Austria, and Vanuatu.

Ton Otto is professor of Anthropology and Ethnography at the University of Aarhus, Denmark. He has conducted long-term fieldwork in Manus (Papua New Guinea) on issues of social and cultural change, and on which he has published in a variety of journals and anthologies. His publications include The Politics of Tradition in Baluan: Social Change and the Construction of the Past in a Manus Society (Nijmegen 1991) and three co-edited volumes: Narratives of Nation in the South Pacific (Amsterdam 1997, with Nicholas Thomas), Cultural Dynamics of Religious Change in Oceania (Leiden 1997, with Ad Borsboom), and Perplexities of Identification: Anthropological Studies in Cultural Differentiation and the Use of Resources (Aarhus 2000, with Henk Driessen). With Poul Pedersen he edited and introduced the special issue on "Anthropology and the Revival of Tradition: Between Cultural Continuity and Invention" in Folk, Journal of the Danish Ethnographic Society, vol. 42 (2000).

Poul Pedersen, senior lecturer in the Department of Anthropology and Ethnography at the University of Aarhus, Denmark, has worked in India (Ladakh and Tamil Nadu). He has edited (with Martijn van Beek and Kristoffer Brix Bertelsen) the book Ladakh: Culture, History, and Development between Himalaya and Karakoram (Aarhus University Press 1999) and written articles on widow-burning; caste and colonial bureaucracy in India; Christian missionaries in India; religion,

Nationalstaat, ed. with Christian Giordano and Elke-Nicole Kappus. Poul Pedersen, senior lecturer in the Department of Anthropology and Ethnography at the University of Aarhus, Denmark, has worked in India (Ladakh and Tamil Nadu). He has edited (with Martijn van Beek and Kristoffer Brix Bertelsen) the book Ladakh: Culture, History, and Development between Himalaya and Karakoram (Aarhus University Press 1999) and written articles on widow-burning; caste and colonial bureaucracy in India; Christian missionaries in India; religion, ecology, and identity; knowledge about nature in Tibet (with Toni Huber); Tibetan Buddhism; history of anthropology. With Ton Otto he edited and introduced the special issue on "Anthropology and the Revival of Tradition: Between Cultural Continuity and Invention" in Folk, Journal of the Danish Ethnographic Society, vol. 42 (2000).

Pierre Petit, research associate at the Belgian National Fund for Scientific Research (FNRS), teaches at the University of Brussels and at the University of Liège. After his PhD, comparing royal and non-royal rituals among the Luba of Katanga (Congo), he conducted fieldwork among the Luba and the Bwile (northern Zambia) about the dynamics of identity and tradition. He presently leads an interdisciplinary centre at the University of Lubumbashi – the Observatory of Urban Change (OCU). Here he has edited Ménages de Lubumbashi entre précarité et recomposition. Paris: L'Harmattan (2003).

Terence Ranger is emeritus professor of Race Relations and African Studies at St Antony's College, Oxford, United Kingdom. He has spent sixteen years at African universities and held Chairs in African or Modern History at UCLA, the Universities of Manchester and Oxford. He is the author of seven monographs on the modern history of Zimbabwe and of a study of Dance and Society in eastern Africa. Having been one of the editors of The Invention of Tradition (Cambridge 1983, with Eric Hobsbawm) he has frequently returned to re-assess the idea. His postscript to this book will be his third such reappraisal. He is currently working on a social history of Bulawayo which includes questions of ethnicity, identity and invented urban traditions.

Andreas Roepstorff is lecturer in the Department of Anthropology and Ethnography, and coordinator of cognitive research at the Danish National Research Foundation's Centre for Functionally Integrative Neuroscience, University of Aarhus, Denmark. He has studied biology (MSc) and social anthropology (MA, PhD) and has conducted research mainly on anthropology of knowledge, processes of identity, and cognitive neuroscience. He has conducted fieldwork in Greenland, Lithuania and European laboratories.

Pietro Scarduelli is associate professor of Cultural Anthropology in the Department of Humanities, University of Eastern Piedmont, at Vercelli, Italy. His main fieldwork has been in Nias Island, Alor Island and Toraja Highlands (Indonesia). His most recent books are: La costruzione dell'etnicità. Turin: L'Harmattan (2000); Antropologia del rito (editor). Turin: Bollati-Boringhieri (2000); Antropologia degli Stati Uniti. Turin: Il Segnalibro (2002); Antropologia dell'Occidente (editor). Rome: Meltemi (2003).

Ausra Simoniukstyte received her BA in History from the University of Vilnius in 1995. In 1996-98 she studied social sciences at the University of Lund, Sweden, where she received an MA in Social Anthropology in 1998. She is interested in national self-identification and the construction of Lithuanianess by members of different social groups in contemporary Lithuania, and her MA thesis focused on these issues. In 2000 Simoniukstyte started a PhD project and carried out extensive fieldwork on the Roma in Lithuania. She is currently a junior research fellow and PhD candidate at the Centre for Stateless Cultures, Vilnius University, Lithuania.
