Acknowledgements

This study was completed for a doctoral research project. It is as a result of the support of a state school in Queensland, Australia, referred to as Bougainvillea State High School that the study was possible. The school's generosity in sharing data, and the teachers' support made the research possible. The commitment of the school is gratefully acknowledged especially the teachers who engaged in the research as one priority of so many in their work.

Thanks are extended to Associate Professor Peter Kell for his valuable and critical comments throughout the research project.

It is hoped that this study contributes to a more positive future for public education in Australia and to the future of education for my children.
