

WHERE PROFESSIONAL WOMEN ACHIEVE

NAB LEADERSHIP AWARDS | NEWSLETTER

- TALKING about
- CAREER agenda
- GUILT-FREE zone
- FUTURE OF work
- NOTICE board
- PERSONAL freedom
- STYLE agenda
- CULTURE agenda
- AGENDA TV & galleries

Kate Galloway

Kate Galloway is a senior law lecturer at James Cook University, and PhD candidate at Melbourne University. She writes regularly on the nature of property and its representations in the law; about issues affecting women; about justice generally; and about legal education.

FOLLOW ME ON TWITTER
KATGALLOW.BLOGSPOT.COM.AU

LATEST articles

OPINIONS

It's time to hang up your aprons in shame
OPINIONS READ >

Why gender equity is an intergenerational issue, especially when it comes to super
OPINIONS READ >

Reporting on violence against women not up to par
OPINIONS READ >

Our representatives are women not many can name
OPINIONS READ >

It's still a long way to the top for Australia's working women
OPINIONS READ >

Gender equality act won't fix discrimination, but it will make employers accountable
OPINIONS READ >

In 10 years inflexible work practices, pay gap and the

TALKING ABOUT / OPINIONS

Previous Next

Is gender equality a non-gendered agenda? Or is it really about women?

BY KATE GALLOWAY / NOV 23, 2012 11:33AM / (0)

The passage overnight of the Workplace Gender Equality Act 2012 (Cth) has been lauded as a significant improvement on its predecessor, the Equal Opportunity for Women in the Workplace Act 1999. The focus of the new legislation is, as its title suggests, on gender equality. According to Helen Conway, director of the Equal Opportunity for Women in the Workplace Agency, it represents a more contemporary approach to the issue of discrimination, particularly in relation to family and caring responsibilities.

I am undecided in my views on this change.

On the one hand, I have long been suspicious of the default position linking childcare with women's child rearing responsibilities. Affordable and accessible quality childcare is widely recognised as essential to facilitate women's full civic participation, including in the paid work force. However, part of the reason for this is the societal expectation that women be the carers of children. This is reflected in media reports that focus on 'women forking out for childcare' and surveys of mothers (generally not fathers) about their childcare arrangements. Additionally, discussions about accessible and affordable childcare for executive or professional women devolve into a debate about middle class welfare that ignores the importance of gender diversity. (See the business case from the Diversity Council of Australia)

What if we re-framed the issue of childcare to focus on children, instead of women? Should we not be challenging the implicit assumption that women alone will take time off to care for infants and young children? And the assumption that women alone should arrange and pay for childcare? I think the new legislation heralds the potential to break this deep seated assumption. By keeping an eye on caring responsibilities of both fathers and mothers, the re-badged agency may well require us to dispense with presuppositions about women and motherhood and shift the national debate to center around families, parents and children; not just women.

On the other hand, the lack of gender diversity in the workplace, on boards and more widely in society is a reflection of deeply held sexist views about women, often unrecognised by those who hold them. These views are enacted and reproduced by institutions such as the law, government, media, family and religion. It is this unconscious bias that results in much discrimination against women. My concern is that in adopting the term 'gender equality', through our language we implicitly deny that there is systemic, institutional discrimination against women.

The other aspect of this concern is the very notion of equality. Equal to what? Are we suggesting that women are to be measured by the existing (male) standard that exists as a function of men's historical domination of the workplace (and elsewhere)? How will equality be measured to the extent that men and women are different?

Happily, Helen Conway has indicated that "the agency will still recognise that women have a particular disadvantaged position in the workplace". There is of course no reason to doubt this, and to remain hopeful of a nuanced approach to gender equality that recognizes the ongoing challenges faced by women as women.

In talking about gender diversity, we know there is a business case, and we all benefit. But in the end, this is about women. I just hope that a non-gender specific agenda will not mask that.

Like 11 Tweet 31 0 Share 0

6

HELEN CONWAY, WORKPLACE GENDER EQUALITY ACT

RELATED by topic

Women on boards: sick of hearing about it yet?
EDITOR'S AGENDA READ

Senior executive pipeline too narrow to get women on boards

ADVERTISEMENT

DAILY newsletter

REGISTER TODAY

I wish to receive special offers via email from related companies

Submit >

By submitting you agree to our Terms & Conditions

LIKE us

WOMEN'S AGENDA

Sign Up Create an account or Log In to see what your friends like.

642 people like Women's Agenda.

LATEST comments

READERS TALK BACK

It's time to hang up your aprons in shame
11 COMMENTS - 1 HOUR AGO

The turning points that increased my need for speed
1 COMMENT - 4 HOURS AGO

How to cope with criticism
1 COMMENT - 6 HOURS AGO

'have it all' dilemma could disappear
OPINIONS READ >

Sen. Michaelia Cash: Australian women deserve a stronger commitment to eliminating violence
OPINIONS READ >

Why men are like Americans: Jane Caro
OPINIONS READ >

Make childcare fair and women will return to work
OPINIONS READ >

TOP STORIES READ

In 10 years inflexible work practices, pay gap and the 'have it all' dilemma could disappear
OPINIONS READ

COMMENT (0)

Type your comment here.

Post as ...

How I met the PM and became part of the 'strategy'
8 COMMENTS - 17 HOURS AGO

Why I will be buying most of my Christmas presents online
9 COMMENTS - 1 DAY AGO

LATEST stories

MUST READS SITE WIDE

What are you known for? How social media can help
BUILDERS READ

'Glacial progress' for women in corporate America
WORLD OF WOMEN READ

Self-promotion isn't sickening, it's necessary
EDITOR'S AGENDA READ

How to cope with criticism
THE DAILY JUGGLE READ

Seventy women to drive ASX gender balance on boards
TOP STORIES READ

WOMEN'S AGENDA is the digital destination for career-minded women, where women (and men) help women achieve. We support women in business, women on boards, women in media, women in leadership and all aspirational women in the workplace.

ABOUT
REGISTER
ADVERTISE
CONTACT US
TERMS & CONDITIONS
PRIVACY POLICY
SITEMAP
AUTHORS

TWITTER
FACEBOOK
YOUTUBE
LINKEDIN
GOOGLE+
PINTEREST

Copyright © 2012 Private Media Pty Ltd.
All Rights Reserved.

Level 6, 22 William St, Melbourne, 3000
Ph: 1800 985 502 Fax: (03) 8623 9975